Peter Lane is an organizational consultant with more than 20 years of experience. He is also a National Board-Certified Health and Wellness Coach (NBC-HWC) trained at the Mayo Clinic. Peter works with individuals and teams that are committed to ongoing learning, reflection, and making positive change for themselves and their organizations. His steady and focused guidance results in improved performance, innovation, and the development of a shared culture of learning and commitment.

Before becoming a wellness coach and consultant, Peter worked for 18 years as director of programs at the Institute for Conservation Leadership where he led the development of the Institute's successful Leading from Within program and designed and facilitated organizational capacity-building projects. Peter facilitates planning processes, designs and facilitates retreats, and provides coaching to teams and individuals. After working with many nonprofit leaders over the years who were experiencing the negative physical and emotional effects of burnout, he decided that focusing on wellness in the workplace is an important strategy for how he can contribute to the success of nonprofit organizations.

Peter serves on the board of directors of the REVE Kandale Foundation, a nonprofit organization that supports school construction and reforestation projects in the Democratic Republic of Congo where he was a Peace Corps volunteer. He is a member of the Mid-Atlantic Facilitators Network and received a B.A. from Clark University and a M.Ed. from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.
